Lets get this behind us. From what I have read, the agreement sounds fair all around. The ones that are still making a big noise, and will continue to do so, are those people associated with Microsoft competitors.

Yes, there are competitors. They would like to see Microsoft put out of business or crippled so bad that they could sell their products without any major Microsoft competition and maybe become king of the hill.

I am not a Microsoft employee or associated with the company in any way. I am a user of Microsoft products, as are a great number of people who are making all the anti Microsoft noise.

There are other choices out there for those that want to use them.

Lets close this chapter and get on with more important business.

I am a taxpayer and don't want to see anymore tax money spent on this.
